Probable Fate of the Treaty in the Senate.

Etc.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Márch 8.—The President will probably nominate to the Senate next week a new Minkete to Brazil, ad, it is said, it disposed to tender the appointment to ex-Senator Williams, of Oregon, one of the Joint High Commissioners. This mission, though of second class, with a salary twelve thousand dollars in gold, will be of more than usual interest, as it is intimated that the new treaty in the San Juan dispute provides that the Emperor of Brazil shall be the arbitrator to decide the boundary question. If the treaty is ratified, the new Minister there will be detained here to take out all the correspondence and documents relating to the arbitrator. WASHINGTON, D. C., March 8.—The Presidocuments relating to the subject on behalf of this Government to the arbitrator.

THE JUNES.

THE JUNES.

The Joint High Commission treaty was signed in duplicate at cleven o'clock this morning at the State Department. The English copy was at once mailed to London, while the American copy was transmitted to the Freaklent to be submitted to the Senate on Wednesday. Some of the English Commissioners left for New York to-day, and will sail from that eity, accompanied by Gen. Schenck, for home in two weeks from Wednesday next. There were mutual congentuations over the signing of the treaty, while the Commissioners on both sides expressed the opinion that ratifications would be exchanged at no distant day.

Senators are coming in quite freely, and it is believed by the end of the week there will be sixty-nine in attendance, which will in-clude all but Senators Ferry, of Connecticut, and Alcorn, of Mississippi, and Goldthwalte Blodgett and Vance, who are not yet admitted to the seats they claim. Possibly Brownlow will not be tool lit ostend. If there is any

If there is any disposition to fight the treaty, it will take but ten Republicans with the fourteen Democratic Senators to destroy the two-thirds vote ro-quired to ratify it. Justice Nelson, however, says it will be impossible to make it a party question.

St. Louis, May 8.—Gen McDenald, Supervisor of Internal Revenue, has just returned from a business trip to the Southern part of the State, and denies having called upon the President for troops to suppress the Kuklux in the Second District of Missouri, as reported from Mashington. The General states, however, that he did some three weeks ago sak for authority and means to make the substitution of the superstance from tillett distillers in the southeastern part of this State. Collector Murdock has several times been opposed by armed bands of these fillett distillers and their employers or friends, and once or twice has been fired upon, and Gen. McDonald has asked for an increased force of Duputy Collectors, so as to cope with the armed resistance to the embrocement law, but and time has he called for troops, ethac to suppress Lukius or collect revenue.

Direct Trade. Before the war the peculiar mode in which business was transacted by Southern planters presented conditions altogether unaversale to direct commercial intercourse with Europa. Consumers and producers of the staple Southern product left the necessity of employing brokers and commission merchants at New York, and commission merchants at New York, and all imports and exports had to pass through that port. The war, which abolished slavery, has compelled the abolished slavery, has compelled the South to look to other sources of prosper-ity besides cotton, to foster immigration, to encourage diversified industries, to enter upon an entirely new era of existence than New York as an entrepot is becomis retarded by the expense of travel from New York to the Southern States. European machinery and manu-factured articles intended for the South are heightened in cost by a needless length of land transit, and Southern pro-duce appeared at a disadvantage in the foreign markets from the same cause. The geographical position of Noriolk points it out as a suitable port for a great between consumers and producers in sev-eral instances by hundreds of miles. upon these shores. They are, for as most part, from the western portions of England and Scotland, and their ruddy checks and stalwart forms shop them to be the true bone and sinew of the county from which they come, and as such will be a vast acquisition in the section in which they design locating. Their destantion is the southwestern portion of this State and the neighboring boundary of Tensessee and North Carolina, and, as we before stated, they will be welcomed heartily in those they will be welcomed heartily in those agricultural districts. They bring means to commence life in their new homes, and will make their fresh start under favorable auspices."

There is no reason why the direct trade now injuginsted should not be permanent, and its discinstone inmensely increased. Agriculturists in Europe want land. The South has land in abundance. Emigrants from Britain, hitherto obstructed, will be from Britain, hitherto obstructed, will be certain to come to live among a people so congenial in every respect, and bring with them the skill in tarming and manufactures necessary to the development of Southern resources. It is needless to hope, however, for liberation from Northern control in industrial and mercantile affairs if the merchants of the West and South do not exert themselves to the utmost in do not exert themselves to the utmost in directing their trade in the desired direc-tion. Resolutions of boards of trade are very good in their way, but the carrying ent of the resolutions is a great deal botter. The opportunity is now offered which will test the companies of the cry so long and loudly raised for direct trade with Europe, this absence of apprehension on the part of the Northern people which bodes the greatest danger. In the South we have passed through a revolution. We have personal knowledge of that sort of thing. We know what it is. We know how easy it is. In the North it is different. The people there are blinded by success and satisfied by prosperity. Those of them who do not dismiss our gloomy auguries with the ready charge of treason, look upon them as the result of proscription, not the out-givings of a healthful and a thoughtful spirit. In truth, if we understand our own mind, it is in this matter not moved by asy partisan consideration whatever. We believe that it is the purpose of General GRANT never to quit the White House; and if we are wrong in this, history teaches othing, and all the signs of the times are

No legislative act was passed in England during CROMWELL's time, nor in France during the domination of Louis Naro-LEON, conferring half such powers upon the government as those which are vested in Gen. The only guarantee which the country has that it guarantee which the country has that it may not be completely imperialized is to be sought for in the moderation of one man, and that a man who has shown himself capable of the greatest excess. The command of the army; the suspension of the writ of habeas corpus; the control of the Federal courts, place one entire section at the mercy of this man, who has only to appeal to the prejudice which gave him the authority in order to exercise it. No hamlet in the South is set to day from invasion. let it the South is sale to day from invasion brought on by a vicious person, who may remain unknown. No man in the South is secure against arrest and imprisonment, trial before a court organized to convict and a jury selected by the aid of a parti-san test-oath, and convicted of a capital crime without so much as a chance for his life. It is nothing that we hear it said that there is no likelihood of such things coming to pass. The law admits of the possibility, and all that is wanting to furnish it is the need to exercise the law. Who shall say that the warlike spirit that begat the act, aroused and set on by par-usan excitement, will not urge its applica-

A determination not to submit to the arrogant prefensions of the Pope pervades all Europe and extends to the Jesults, who not only claim absolute power in spiritual matters, but, according to the special organs of the order, unifmited sovereignty in temporal affairs. According to their claims all the rulers of the earth are but so many governors, whe are to obey implicitly the commands of the sovereign pontiff, not only in their spiritual affairs, but also in all the rest. This is the absolute defiscation of one man, or rather of a set of men, and the total cuthralimen. of a set of men, and the total enthrallmen of all the rest of mankind, who are to b of all the rest of mankind, who are to be like so many slaves that are to do their bidding. This is in plain words the monstrous doctrine to whose introduction into the articles of faith of the Catholic church Professor Dokliness objects, and in this objection he is supported not only by almost the entire Catholic faculty of the University of Munich but he shaded almost the entire Catholic faculty of the University of Munich, but by that of all the other Catholic universities of Germany. The different governments of Germany have also forbidden the official promulgation of the dogma within their States as indirect opposition to the laws of the country, and particularly the Bavarian Government, the most Catholic of Germany, has not only most Catholic of Germany, has not only most Catholic of Germany, has not only been especially energetic in the measures adopted, but its young King takes every occasion to show the veteran Doklinger all possible sympathy, and has written an autograph letter to him, in which he assures him of his esteem. A Live American Poet.
The current number of Every Saturday contains two full-page reprints of Mr John Hav's poems, "Jim Bludso" and "Little Breeches," with illustrations by Sol Evernes. The pictures are not quit up to the mark of the artist, who is genof the verses which they are meant embellish. It has been many a day sin our literature produced anything nearly so good as "Jim Bludso" and "Little Breeches." "Nothing to Wear" and the Breeches." "Nofhing to wear and use "Heathen Chinee" proved sensational in the highest degree, and, though far aparthave in their own way undoubted merit Mr. Har's sketches are less sensations are sensations of the sensations are sensations. but they possess more power both of feeling and outline. English criticism showed ready appreciation in placing "Jim Bludge" alongside of "Herve Riel." There is a deah of BROWKING'S marrow and backbone in HAY'S work, which, it comparisons are not weaply described to any wife. DODE IN HAY'S WORK, Which, it comparisons are not meaningless, deserves to rank with WHITTHER'S best. "Jim Bludso" is in every way equal to "Skipper Ireson's Ride," and "Little Breeches" is hardly interior to "Mand Muller." In each the nierior to "Mand Muller." In each the common-place is made inheanely dramatic. Glanced over, they appear to harcoal sketches; more carefully observed, the lines deepen and grow distinct; studied, and they begin to push their features upon the imagination, until, in place of a few hasty pencil marks; there lies before the mind's eye a very perfect impression. Mr. Har's as "Bake" i'm" is less effective, though pencil marks, there lies before the minds of a very perfect impression. Mr, Har's last, "Rainty Jim," is less effective, though strong, because of a certain occasional air, which always reduces the market value of poetry. Indeed, whilst sympathizing with its spirit and purpose, it has yet a political bias that is unartistic and repellant, albeit involving a good, sound, manly moral. The two pieces mentioned above are in every way succeive to it, mare are in every way superior to it, more natural, more characteristic, more original natural, more characteristic, more original and durable, and in them Mr. Hav has at once a conspicuous site and firm-set foundation for building his literary for-West as a man may be, a rough-and-tumble, devil go-easy river man, engine-driver of the Prairie Belle. "He weren't no saint," Mr. Hay tells us-Is saint, "BIT. TAY Tells us.

Is all pretty much sinke,"
One wife in Natchas-under-the-Hill
And another one acce, is Pike;
A keriese man in his taix was Ju,
Bit he acver duried, and he never ind,—
In cknow he never know do how."
This, the poet adds, was about the sum total of Mr. Blupseo's religion. His aim was to tell the truth, treat his engine was to tell the truth, treat his engine was to tell the truth, treat his engine kindly and mind the pilot's bell, virtues certainly, in spite of bigamistic tendencies. Mr. Evyrnon's sketch represents the gay and festive engineer as a good-looking fellow, with a cigar in his mouth and a questionable person on his arm. He is questionable person on his arm. He is doubtless narrating his exploits, perhaps engaging, in case the Frairie Belle should ver catch fire, that "He'd hold her nozzie agin the bank Till the last soul got ashore," a thing which Mr. Bludso often swore he'd do, and a thing which it was, from he'd do, and a thing which it was, from the first, pretty sure he'd have a chance to do. The denouement came, and, being told in the last four verses of the poem, may be quoted entire as an illustration of what we have been saying. All boats on the Mississippi have their day, and the Prarie Belle came to hers in time. "The Moyaster was a better boat but the Belle Movaster was a better boat, but the Belle she wouldn't be passed":

And so she come tearin' along that night— the oldest craft on the line—with a ninger squat on her safety-valve, And her furbace crammed, rosin and pine. The fire bust out as she clared the bar, And ourns a bule in the alght, And quick as a fisch she turned, and made For that willorbank on the right. There was running and cursts, out Jim yelled

Over sil the infernal roar.
"I'd hold her nozzie agin the bank
Till the last galeot's ashore." brough the hot, black breath of the burnt DOM.

JER BLUBBO'S voice was heard,
At d they sit had trust in his cussedoes
And knowed to would keep his word.
And, Aur. 's you're both, they all got off
Afore the monkestanks fell—
And Richse's ghost went up alone
In the smoke of the Prairie Beile. He weren't no saint—but at jedgment I'd tun my chance with Jia.
I'd tun my chance with Jia.
I'n tun my chance with Jia.
I nai wouldn't shoot heads with him.
He seen his duty, a cead-sure thing—
And what for it thar and then,
Acd chairs sin't a going to be too hard
On a man that died for men.

There are undoubted freshness power-both pathos and humor-in all this. The story is told tersely and unaiincitally. The vulgate is not termined. The sentiment is not stilled. It has, as a picture, that insinuating quality which Mr. JEFFERSON'S personation of Rir Van WERKLE has, and it is sufficiently dramatic to suggest that if the gr domestic players should ever change the greatest of domestic pieces upon the pub-lic, he might find in this river hero a most animating and original claim upon genius.

Indeed, it is surprising that the Western waters, more perilous than the seas-crowded with strange craft and creatures, over-charged with the spirit of adventure, abounding in variety and character, owning a dialect and covered over with a sor of mysterious haze, have remained so long untouched by the wand of the artist, the poet or the novel-writer. "Jim Bludso" opens a new vein, a vein which might be worked with profit by the most ambitious litterateur or painter. Mr. Hay has touched it with a painter, Mr. Hav has touched it with a bold though sparing hand—as if to test it— and the way thus blazed, it is to be hoped that something will come of it to contradict the notion that there is no material for American fiction. Mr. BRET HARTE's prose sketches furnish a hopeful angury in one direction; and Mr. Hav's "Little Breeches," the second of the norms mantioned contribsecond of the poems mentioned, contrib-utes something like proof at the same time that it shows our author to be capable of that it shows our author to be capative to more than one flavirate conception. This fatal circumscription has hitherto abridged the success of our humorists, who have created striking but half finished models of good things, and stopped there.

Neither of Mr. Hax's two poems repeats the other, though they bear a strong family likeness and are equally graphic. In "Budso" we have the heroic in the ascendant. In "Little Breeches" it is the domestic. It is not easy to read the poem aloud unmoved, with its quaint pathos and its queer vernacular. It narrates a trivial and ordinary incident, surrounded by the plainest accessories, in a most life-like and plainest accessories, in a most life-like and inspiring way. It is merely the story of how a prairie man comes to town with a wagon of turnips and leaves his team in charge of his little boy Ganz at the door of a store which he enters to get a jug of molasses; the horses are frightened and run away; and then follows a unick numit; the week is found but not

The Radical ex-members of the The Radical ex-members of the Porty-first Congress are still proviling around Washington in search of something to do. They are willing to do almost anything for a living. At any rate it would seem so from the fact that one of them, it is said, has applied for the situation of husband to Anna Dirakinson.

In Randolph county, Mo., there is a hog that has eight noses. If he belongs to the Radical party—and the chances are that he does—it is a wonder that he has never been pressed into service as the chairman of a Congressional smelling committee. A Radical politician is to deliver a ecture next season on "Rings and Lobby-sts," and the New York Mail says "he will handle the subject without gloves.'

If he does, it will be a very dirty subject by the time he is done with it. The Rochester Union tells us that "OLIVE LOGAN says she is thirty-two rears old." Yes, that is about her age. We remember hearing her say so in 1827. The New York Sun never speaks of the New York Standard except as "the Thieves' Own." In this the Sun is singuarly severe upon the thieves. The New York Times advises readers to "give the devil his due." If the devil had his due, we should have no New

A Weasure Ference.

We have received from John P. Morton & Go. thin volume of verse with the above title, published by James R. Osgood & Co.

Most of the contents are so very frothy that a title is a would change them into vapid pitcs. The sentiment is almost always strained and the measuring too often obscure. If to be bacobernst is to be position, then this author was lightly claim the buys. It is hardly worth the to puszie over the measuring of lines that gank of roses that "bud like dreams is the map of the dead," for if there is any measuring in it, of which we have our double, I would "require a surgical operation" to get it like to meet heeds. Of a similar neture is the appreadon, "and his the same to the colors op power." What is said in it is reciseve to words and their origin and change of meaning, and the strong tendency to shing on the part of many persons of the present day, is very foreible and lingentous; but the strictures upon style and the examples adduced are, to say the least, unfair. Surely Longfellow does not deserve to be classed with Tupper, nor chould the efficiency of an unknown versifier like E. H. Smith be taken to illustrate American literature. The originalty of E. W. Etherson might be appre classed with Topper, nor should the effacious of an unknown versifier IRE E. H. Smith be taken to Illustrate American literature. The originality of R. W. Wait Whitman is a writer whose works once secured a short-lived notoriety, owing to external causes; but no person supposes nows-adays that they express either clearly, or originally, the teriure of American thought, unless it be gone man who profers to say a smart thing regardless of securacy. Our sense of propnety is hurt at finding such flippant judgments recorded in a review that has in it so much that its sound and scholarly to recommend it to the Southern people. The succeeding paper on The Latin Races in America is a lengthy stricle, whose purport is to show that "the prejudice of color is no prejudice a all; but, on the contrary, a very proper, valugable language and his departures from the restitude of clear hencet thinking." Col. Smith's Captivity with the Indiana.

This is the title of one of the reprints of Robert Clarke & Co., Cmcinnati, belonging to the Ohio Valley Hatorical Series, and is not the least interesting of that valuable collection. Col. James Smith was one of the early settlers of Kentucky, and his narrative, given in his own words, of his capture by the Indiana, and his experiences while with them, is not only valuable in a historical point of view, but is extremely interesting to the general reader. His description of the manners and cautoms of the Indiana is equivalent to the general historical point of the security and the story of his remarkable adventures among them, while it simply records actual experience, is as emirancing as the most elaborate Schlon. His companion at the time of his capture was killed and seeinged, but he hisseelf was unwounded sod was taken by his Indian captors. His companion at the time of his expure was hilled and -ealpack but he limeself was unwounded and was taken by his Indian captors to Force Quesses, then in the hands of the French, where he arrived a few days previous to 6 mddock's defeat, and witnessed there the horrible treatment of the prisoners by the Indians. He was forced to, run the gantlet and was heaten almost to death. Upon his recovery he asked one of the Indian whether he had offended them in any way that they treated him so cruelly. The Indian, somewhat grimly, self no, that it was only a custom, and was like saying how do you do, and that he would be well treated in the fature. A short time after this, he was taken to the Indian village, some forty miles north of the present site of Pittsburg, and was there formally adopted into the tribe of his expirer. His acand of Pittsburg, and was there formally adopted into the tribe of his captors. His secount of this is as follows: "A number of Indians collected around me, and one of them began to pull the hist out of my head. He had some ashes on a piece of bark, in which he frequently dipped his fingers in order to take the firmer hold, and so he went on, as if he had been pincking a turker antil be frequently dipped his flagers in order to take the firmer hold, and so he went on, as if he had been plucking a turkey, multibe had all the hair clean out of my head, except a small spot about three to four inches square on my crown. This they cut off with a pair of solasors, excepting three locks which they dressed up in their own mode. Two of these they wrapped round with a narrow beaded garter, made by themselves for that purpose, and the other they platted at full length, and then almost it full of silver brooches. After this they bored my nose and ears and fixed me off with ear-rings and mose jevels. Then they ordered me to strip will my clothes and put on a breech-clout, which I did; then they painted my head, siec, and body in visious colors. They put a large belt off wampain on my neck and aliver heads on my hands sond right arm; and so in old chief add my out in the street and gave the slarm halloo, coo-wight several those, repeated quick; and on this all that were in the town came running and stood round the midst. When he hand done a very long and very lond speech he handdone a to three young aquars, who led me by the hand down the bank like the view want the marker mid to be seen to brance me in the see me to plungs aquars, who led me by the hand down the bank like the view want the marker my the bank like the view with the marker, but I was not a present the bank like the view want the marker, but I was not a present the bank like the view was the me me to three young aquars, who led me by the hand down the me in the me in the principle of the proper than the proper than the like the view with the water, but I was not a proper than the proper than the law when the low when the low when the low was the me they were the the me when the law was the law when the law when the law was the l that were on the bank of the river. At length one of the equate made at to spane a little English—for I believe they began to be afraid of me—and said, 'No hurt you.' On this I gave myself up to their highyship, who were as good as their word, for though they plunged me under water, and washed and rabbed me teventy, yet I shall not my they hurt me much." After this queer common be was led to the council house, dressed in havit me mach. After this queer carnets he was led to the council house, dressed in Indian garb, and a long apecch inflicted upon him. Asks Completed his adoption into the tribe. Some months after this when he had just obtained a new suit or clothes, and with his head, as he says, "done off like a red-headed wood-pecker," he wast down into the corn field, with a number of young Indians, to see the agusts at work. "When we came there," he may, "the aquasts asked me to take a hoe, which i did, and hoed for some time. The squares applianced me as a good hand at the business; but when I returned to the town the old men shid me, and said that I was adopted in the place of a great man, and must not hoe seen site a squaw. They never had occasion to reprove me for anything like this again; as I were was extremely found of work, I readily complied with their orders." Nevertheless, he was always anxious to escape, and in the fifth year of his capitivity he was enabled to do this, and giad esouph was he to hoe corn again among his own race and kindred. SMALL TALK.

The foldianapolis daily Sestined states that a novel legal question his been decaded in a suit brought a mouth ago by Mesers. Baker & Bernhamer, attorages for Alois Klanner, against the administrator of the catate of James Bowner, deceased, charging that Bowser broke and entered the plaintiff's close and shot the plaintiff unon him several severe wounds, and that Bowner then an action for injuries to the person dies with the party inflicting the injuries, but the action of trespass for entering the plaintiff's close does not so dis. This suit ingeniously avoids that difficulty by making the injuries to the person an aggravation of the anastative charge. Mesers. Fortor, flarrison & Himes and Finch, illed a petition to attack out of the complaint all that referred to the injuries to the person, agon the ground that the estante beined them from the action. His Honor, Judge Howland, on Saturday, overrised the motion, and held the matters properly charged. This is thought to be the ploneer case of the kind.

Beecher's Stepmother Descing a Jig,

Beston Journal New York Lotter.

It is well known that Mr. Beecher keeps a reporter in his chareh. The form of Mr.
kill-uwood is as well known as that of the Plymouth pastor, the has ast for years at a little table in front of the platform, and takes down averything Mr. Beecher seys—his notices, prayers and sermons. These Mr.
Beecher revises before they are published.
Sharp, racy, humonous utlerances, keen remarks, sentences thrown off in the heat of speaking, witticlums that shake the Plymouth audience as the forest leaves are shaken by the wind, are often missed in the public rebeer point, because no reporter can alve down the manner of their utlerance. Last Sunday morning he brought his stepmother on to the platform. He described her as a woman of great excellence, but as a great martinet. Strict in her religious practices and teachings, and, like the mistreas of Dotheboys Hall, she gave her children weekly a tiff dose of the Catechism. She was the plak of propriety, and held in abhorence all vain and trifting ammements. Dr. Beecher had made, and Old flundred, and he did not exsacily know where the once began and the other ended. One day he was amusing himself on his javoriet instrument, and struck up a genunce jig which unsanctified had been ranning in his bead ever since he was a boy. Just at that moment the mother came in, and, caschling the inspiration of the tune, placed her hands on he hips and squally danced a minut. Mr. Beecher described the scene. He hands on his hips, and showed the audience how his mother did it. He described the consternation of the children. He clasped his hands, rolled up the whites of his gwes like a regular Mawworm, onench his mouth, drew down has lip, and shoot dhe personification of rustic horror. The whole scene was irrestitbly comic. He wound do the his hough the his Carchism less he would have had a happler

Only a Jar of Honey.

Yeste day evening about 5 o'clock Mr. J. E. Saie went thin the Daniel Boone Bewerr, corner of Seventeenth and Market strokes, Carrying a jar of honey which he had just purchased. Chas. Hungs, the proprietor, was slightly intoxicated, and was boasting of his great strength. Mr. Saie picted up one chair and held to out as rare's length. Mr. Haungs said that he could hold out dwe instead of one. The jar of honey was best springs a giase of beer that he could not raise the chairs. He made the effort, and though he ratted them all from the foor, it was not done in the prescribed manner. But Hungs jetked up the honey and carried it behind the counter, thereby amouncing to the astonished srowd that he consistent of himself the winner. Mr. Saie exposits lated not reasoned with him, but without effect, purpose. He said he had won the house in the purpose. He said he had won the house in the intended to keep it. cured from Squire Samuela. It was served by Lieutenans Byerly and Bruner, who made every effort in their power to obtain possession of the honey without arresting Haung; but their ratooling and persuasion were of no avail. The men postificity refused to give it up, and was immediately taken to the station-hones. Soon after the landhay sent over the jar of honey to kr. Sale. Thus the matter ended with Haungs in Sale. Thus the matter ended with Haungs in the lock-up.
